GOA

India's smallest and richest state, Goa is a cultural fusion of eastern and western influences. Years of Portuguese rule have given it a unique identity, quite unlike any found elsewhere in India. Goa is famous for its sandy beaches and tropical climate, but our Goa holidays will reveal a destination with much more to offer.

IT ALL STARTS WITH DEU BORO DIS DIUM

Goa's history goes back thousands of years and its rock art engravings are the earliest traces of human life in India. Much of the state exhibits the cultural influence of the Portuguese who first landed here in the early 16th century.

The city of Old Goa or 'Velha Goa' served as the capital of Portuguese India and the remains of the city are now a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Rising high above the Chapora River, the 500-year-old ruins of Chapora Fort are also a pleasant place to wander. The ruins command views in all directions and far out to the Arabian Sea.

A biodiversity hotspot, Goa is also rich in flora and fauna, but it's the white-sand beaches which stretch out along the Arabian Sea that are what really make Goa holidays so special.

Here, you can spend your days lounging in the sunshine or exploring the colourful roadside markets just off the beach. As the sun sets, enjoy an altogether different pace as the streets come alive with DJs playing the latest tunes in the busy bars.

Taj Exotica

Attain complete relaxation in the landscaped grounds of the Taj Exotica, which lies on a private beach overlooking the Arabian Sea. Relax your nerves with a therapy session at the Jiva Spa, lounge by the pool, gorge on some delicious fare, try your hand at archery or enjoy some fun watersports! Taj Exotica is renowned as one of the best hotels in Goa with private beach.

Even the food they serve has a huge influence of its Portuguese history and Konkani culture. However, if you feel like sticking to your favorite, you can be assured to find everything from Mexican to Italian and everything in between.

The world is full of food-loving people, and everyone wants to try out new gourmet dishes; and Goa surely doesn't disappoint. The staple food of Goans, the 'fish curry and rice' remains people's favorite. The local restaurants serving traditional Goan food are just as popular as the international food chains in Goa!

Islam set its foot in Goa in the 14th century after popularity by Delhi Sultanate. Muslims ruled the state till 1510 when Portuguese admiral Afonso de Albuquerque defeated the Adil Shahi dynasty.

CULTURE

A former Portuguese colony, Goa is also fondly known as the 'Rome of the East'. Inhabited and colonized by the Portuguese for almost 450 years, the culture of Goa is distinctly different from that of the rest of the nation. Here is a quick run-down of the rich and varied heritage of Goa.

Goa has a fascinating historical past which dates back further to the 3rd century BC. A prominent part of the Mauryan Empire, Goa was of prime importance because of its natural harbours and wide river base. Only in 1987 did Goa get the status of an independent state and the regional language Konkani was recognized as one of India's official languages.

A small state on India's western coast, Goa has always benefitted as a trade centre because of its easily accessible ports. With a beautiful harmonization of the East and West, Goans have taken the best of both worlds. A civilization of warm, happy people, Goa sees a mix of different religions like Christians, Catholics, Muslims, and Hindus that live together in harmony. Following their age-old traditions and customs, Goans celebrate all major festivals with fervour without bringing any religious barriers within the society.

With a strong influence from the west, Goa has always had a more contemporary mindset. Their rich heritage culture has not been tarnished by the rapid industrialization that has become commonplace in the rest of India yet. Celebrating livelihood and religious festivals with scrumptious food and delightful music, the locals are humble, warm and fun-loving individuals.

The traditional wear of the Goan population has a lot of influence from Western culture. The Koli fishermen dress in half-pants and bright shirts. Tribal communities wear loincloths with a thick blanket on their shoulders. The modern population has adapted western wear. Most of the womenfolk wear 9-yard sarees or skirts. Traditional jewelry is worn by women.

Festivals

Goa is famous for its Indo-Latin festivals, carnivals, and fiesta. If you are looking for a European styled celebration, Goa is the right place to visit. On the other hand, traditional Hindu festivals are also common here. Top festivals to enjoy here are Easter, Diwali, Christmas, GaneshChaturthi, Goa carnival, Feast of St. Francis Xavier and others. Apart from religious festivals, Goa is the land, where festivals for music, dance, and other cultural elements are conducted.

Language

Konkani is the major language in this region. Almost all Goans can understand and speak Konkani. Apart from Konkani; Marathi and Hindi are quite common. Konkani was derived from the ancient language of Indo-Aryan civilization. The languages spoken by different communities in this region vary from each other. The Christian communities speak Konkani with a lot of influence from Portuguese vocabulary. Those who live in Northern Goa will have a greater accent of Marathi and Hindi, because of the proximity to Mumbai. Apart from this, English is a common language here.
